Today we went hunting for avalanche crowns in the Bridger Range and found some big ones. Avalanches broke deep across most slopes along the entire east and west sides of the range. Some of the most impressive were in Truman Gulch. Stay alert for the possibility to trigger these big slides. Keep the smooth bed surfaces in mind as potential future weak layer when they get reloaded. Photo: GNFAC

Advisory Region
Bridger Range
Longitude

-110.93W
Latitude
45.81N
Avalanche Details: Truman Gulch Natural Deep Slabs
Bridger Range, 2020-02-09