Walked around up Flanders today... 10-12 cm new snow that came in as rain. Plenty of rime and snice crusts all over the trees and cliffs. ATL probably got a bit more. Winds were calm and we didn't observe anything more than a few dry loose in steep terrain. We only walked up to 8k or so but the "pack" that we observed was essentially just the new snow. Obs from before the storm was that snow persisted in some shaded areas above 8k but mostly above 8500.
